

Matt Carpenter is a graduate of San Diego State University's School of Public Administration and Urban Studies. He's served as vice president of the San Diego Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration and is currently a member of the American Planning Association, and serves on the Board of Directors for the Arizona Transit Association. Matt served almost one decade with the Arizona Department of Transportation in the position of ADOT regional planner during the formation of the CYMPO and most recently as Interim Director of ADOT's formal Public Transportation Division. Matt has over six-years in both public and private sector experience in transit planning and grant management, focusing on both urban and rural transit programs statewide.